For Janey Work.

An embroiderey frame for the finest fancy work is made of a small hoop, over which the work is stretched, and then secured by a little strap and buckle. The work is held taut and can be moved as required, while the whole thing is light and little enough to hold easily upon the lap.

Hair Drying Stoves.

In the hair-dressing parlors of New York where women pay 50 cents for a shampoo and 75 cents for a shampoo with whipped egg trimmings, the tresses are fried over a small sheet-iron stove. The attendant mops the wig with a towel. the customer's back, lets the hair hang down a tin spout, turns on the gas, gives her a fashion paper to read and goes off for twenty or thirty minutes cas the editor of a certain magazine he ne day received a story from Miss Elizabeth Stuart Phelps, which he did not care to publish. Why? Well, it was called "The Oysterman," and it dealt with all sorts of queer people, who did nelegant things and were not given to ood English. As Miss Phelps had been the habit of having all her work acepted, Mr. Howells didn't at first know ust what to do, but he finally wrote: You know, Miss Phelps, this is not a densant story." Some months later "The hysterman" made its appearance in another magazine, but its author had profited by such distinguished criticism nd its title now was "Not a Pleasant Story.

Naming Miss Phelps's Story.
